

Artist Name: Black James

AS A young man who suffers from mental illness, I try to cast what I see myself as on paper, to express my grief, and in a way cope. I used my prison experience to find myself. In the chaotic streets of Detroit, I grew up being in a sheltered environment. I lost the opportunity of self discovery until recently. My Art evolved to a form of expression of what its like to point your finger at yourself and ask the hard questions. My goal is to share my grief with those who feel in a similar sense. If you go with the motions, then you lose yourself to the stream.
