This journey has taught me that life is the manifestation of all spirits being realized in this moment and that god is the director of the imaginative force which inspires the process.

How else does one construct anything but than with thought. When you dissect reality its the only theory which fits clean for me.

If humanity were one, then the blacksmith which molds us would be god. Our struggles serve as the slag left over in the smelting process and the remaining metal is our virtue which will serve to be forged into the tools of gods art.

Thanks to everyone involved.
