Beauty Out of the Darkness

The prevailing mood behind these walls is that of negativity. Anger, sorrow, frustration - these emotions and others comprise the majority of the sentiments held by those here. Surrounded by so much of this, from both those who live, and work here, it's difficult to maintain a smile for long. It doesn't help that our own sorrows and frustrations eat away at us.

Through art, we seek to channel this negativity into something less ugly. We defy our dark and dreary environment, attempting to draw beauty out of nothing. Whether we've succeeded, or failed lies not in our perspective, but yours. Have we sufficiently poured our hearts and souls into these works of art? I ask you not to see, but to feel what we have expressed through these humble mediums.

Thank you,
