I started doing art when I was a little girl, but realized that I was actually passionate about it when I was in high school. That's when I really started to see my own capabilities. Over the years it has become an escape for me. It's how I get away from the outside world and completely dive into my own thoughts... which sometimes isn't exactly an escape. 😊 Like most people I truly am my own biggest critic, but in the end I'm always surprised that I can create beautiful things. However, I think my favorite thing about art is that it allows me to see how my mind actually works, which is a pretty cool thing!
