

Artist Name: Erik D. Burney

The inspiration to this piece was Duality, one person with the ability to be extremely loved and also be extremely hated. The side on the right was sketched completely separate from the side on the left, I just thought when watching him on the news so much that it was interesting that he made the same exact expression when both happy, and angry. The clouds in the background of the left hand side represent to me how people that adore him feel that the government was "full of dark clouds" until he arrived and drained the swamp. The piece on the right pretty much speaks for itself it represents the people who feel no matter what he is an evil man, when the piece on the left represents how the people that support him views him, but the thin line down the middle is not mere decoration, it represents the small margin of people who don't care either way. I could go on all day boring you with reasons why I did other things to this piece, but I wouldn't want to give you all the answers it should be fun for a person to try and figure them out. But I hope you enjoy this piece, and thank you for your time!

Erik,
