Vita Eterna

I started drawing and becoming interested in art at a young age and loved it because it was the most effective outlet for self-expression for me. I lost interest in it as I got later in my teen years and it wasn't until after becoming incarcerated that I finally found my way back to my passion for art and began drawing again and even pursuing more challenging styles of art like portraiture and photorealism, which I enjoy the most.

The piece of artwork I have on display today is a reflection of myself and my beliefs. I wanted to portray my hands with some envisioned religious images to express the love I hold for God. The tattooed words "Pray" and "Love" on my hands are the message I really wanted to leave you all with because I believe they tell who I am and the ideals that I live by. I hope you enjoy my colorful rendition as much as I do.
