the picture represents the life of the path you choose to walk, the emotional stress and struggle we endure with dealing with the Darkness of life but there is light in the darkness that's the path of righteousness to where all good and great things come to the person who is patience and loving but with the light there comes challenges and still with struggle but it's about the way you can handle it and make it count for something and not nothing because of Darkness shows the easy^{way} and the easy it comes the easy and faster it goes, with the light is everlasting helps build character and a stronger love for what you do and appreciate things you've worked for and loved, to where the Darkness only allow you take & steal for it's all for granted, for it do not teaches you how to value and cherish the things of life or of the light of the heart.
