Third Eye: Corrupt

Given a life sentence, I've come to a point where "why not?" is a good reason to do and learn most anything. So I draw on ~~many~~ occasions. I have no training, but when an idea comes to mind, I just wing it. As for these pieces, I like to think they're self-explanatory. But then again, I made them. "You Had to Be There" is a tip of the hat to psilocybin, a substance that I believe science will validate as highly therapeutic when used right. But it also is a celebration of experience and the unexplainable. "Third Eye: Corrupt" touches on abuses of 'power', which is a tool, neither good nor evil. Throughout many cultures, the third eye is seen as a thing of enlightenment, knowledge, and power, and as most things, it is corruptable, becoming warped.
