PCAP Miniatures 2021 Exhibit

Artist Name: Isaac Fezzey

The poem in this piece just formed one night while I tried to sleep and kept me awake until I wrote it down. It's my first one, and frankly I wasn't sure of what it was about until the day I finished the accompanying drawing. As it stands, I think it's about the coldness that comes with loss, which makes sense, having lost my life (so to speak), my grandma, and my mom, all in my first 3 years in prison. Things may feel cold, but life goes on, and with it comes warmth. (Regarding "Mourning Glory")

This piece was just a feel-good project, as I'm fond of forests and nighttime. That it gave me blending practice is a bonus. In all seriousness though, if you've never found time to enjoy a forest on a clear night, I'd advise you to find the time. (Regarding "Reminiscent")
