A Dream Home

This past year I have had a lot going on, but that still did not stop me from doing a lot of different works. This past year I have been experimenting with color and with just black and white. In "My Dream Home" I used many different colors, and combined some to get many different variations. In "Judgement" I put my shading to the test to create a dramatic depiction of Judgement reaping lost souls. Other works I am submitting are similar to the other two I described either combining colors to shade or by using graphite to shade and create unique textures. I always challenge myself when I work on my next project, and hope to only get better with practice.
