Melting Time

To quote Pina, "Art usually comes from pain." Art gives an individual a way to show how pain can also be beautiful. It may be an emotional moment every time the pencil touches paper. Through putting my that pain on paper it heals the soul. Here is the meaning behind my two pieces of pain.

In Drowning, no matter how well a person can figuratively swim in life. We all hit a time when the waves keep crashing over head, knocking us down. The question for the viewer is this. If that person in the drawing was you. Would you give up and sink to the depths, or would you fight to help yourself be rescued. The helicopter represents that lifeline that is out there for us all.

In Melting Time, the metaphor is simpler. In 2014 my clock stopped and began melting away.

I would like to thank every one who shows interest, and gives their time to appreciate the beauty of an artists pain.
