

Artist Name: "WrathWorld"

Hello again,

I wanted to give a little back info about the piece "Idol Hands". It's a concept I thought of as I was sitting around "Thinking" I was bored. I decided to do a play on my own inner battle's of choosing to do things productive with my time versus wasting it doing ~~things~~ things that may not be so good. The inside orb is an example of the "Raw" potential I believe everyone has, the lines escaping are the many possibilities. The differences in the wings are to be seen as both the natural flaw, almost angelic in character along with a warped demonic creature-like wing, mischievous in a way. The sum of it all is, "You choose your path".

The piece "Kolorad Girl" is tribute to my daughter JaZelle who is 10, and loves all things Art. Her aura is as bright as the sun, and she goes through each day attempting to figure out who she is as well as giving me a chance to bond over our love for Artistic release. The fire in her eyes is symbolic of the determination she has to fight for a connection with a father that is incarcerated. The tear is one of joy when she got news of my resentencing and opportunity to finally make it home.