Breaking These Chains

"Breaking These Chains" is an original art by RStarB that when viewed at a mere glance, it's fiery vibrant colors contrasted with an overlooming darkness captivates almost any audience to look closer for a deeper understanding.

Initially the eye of God may draw your focus inward and subtly, subconsciously upward in spirit, bringing to light a reflection of our own character and integrity; knowing beyond measure and comprehension that he at least is always watching.

Though He was perfect, Christ His son learned obedience, like each of us, through the things which he suffered. We, like He have been strained, stretched, and torn inside; drawn downward by the pit of Hell, wondering of our own purpose or destiny. So many of us have been chained and enslaved by our own choices or inability, lacking wisdom, or rejecting that which is offered freely.

His hands and feet pierced, thorns driven into his skull, his back fleyed with brutal lashes, infection, filth and pain. His side speared, his heart broke, and both his father and moter were witness to it all. Satan anchored by hell itself, constantly pulls at the chains suspending christ in the air for all to see. The pulleys compound the force applied, just like the consequences of our own doing complicates our own lives, our own relationships, our own peace, love and joy.

Still, He holds the whole world in his hand bearing our sins for anyone willing and desperately wanting to BREAK THESE CHAINS.
